on its last legs. If only the Company's statements were considered, it would seem that everything was working as noothly as before the tie-up.

Careful investigation of the true state of affairs, however, does not bear out the statements of the Lehigh officials, that the strike is broken and that the men who quit work are ready to return. This is the situation as explained by

"We have had five trains in since 6 o'clock last night. We sent out a train at eight o'clock this morning, another at 8.30 and before noon expect to have three more moving westward. Before night we hope to start five more trains from

"It is highly probable," said one of them, "that we would hold a meeting and appoint a committee to wait upon Mr. Maxwell for the purpose of assuring him him of our loyalty. The truth a that it would take very little to precipitate a strike on the Central road."

This was the opinion expressed by a majority of the men employed in and about the Communipaw station.

Herbert Banks, a non-union switchman, had his hand smashed between the buffers of two freight cars at the Communipaw yards this morning. He was taken to the Jersey City Hospital and three fingers were amputated.

This was the first accident to a non-union man there since the strike began.
